THE ORANGE WINE REGION

In the late 1970's and early 1980's Stephen Doyle completed extensive site selection research throughout several Australian regions, it was Orange that he would deem the perfect place to grow grapes. He and wife Rhonda would relocate to Orange and begin plantings. Their efforts would become known as Bloodwood, a trailblazing vineyard that would not only help establish a wine industry but assist in creating one of New South Wales' most popular food and wine hubs.

The likes of Bloodwood would later be joined by other early pioneers along the Cargo Road area, including Murray Smith, who began Canobolas-Smith Wines. The winery became a cult hero through brilliant releases such as the Alchemy, which garnered international praise and a legion of followers' keen to see its development from vintage to vintage.

Iconic winemaker Philip Shaw also took an interest in the region and established a vineyard at what is now known as the Koomooloo Vineyard. Philip would use the vineyard to help assist Rosemount Wines to producing some wonderful cool-climate expressions. Later Philip would have his own label, Philip Shaw Wines, now operated by his sons Daniel and Damian. Today Philip has embarked on a new adventure known as Hoosegg wines, still sourcing fruit from the same vineyard.

As the new century approached more and more producers were beginning to emerge in the region. The Robsons, Terry and Peter, invested in the region and today are responsible for Australia's first ever carbon neutral certified winery, Ross Hill. The two industry leaders have focused on creating a unique cellar door experience and now with son James and his wife Chrissy, offer cooking schools, wine education and one of the best tasting experiences in the region.

With great wine came great food. It wasn't long before the region garnered the attention of major chefs out of metropolitan areas. Sydney Morning Herald Hall of Fame Chef Michael Manners and partner Josephine would help conduct regular dinners in the region during its infancy stages. Later, in 1997 they would move to the region and establish the restaurant Selkirk's. One year later it would win the coveted best regional restaurant.

More leading chefs would follow, with Simonn Hawke establishing Lolli Redini at the beginning of the new century. Today, with the assistance of her partner Leah, the restaurant has proceeded to win an incredible number of accolades and become a regional dining institution.

In 2003 Tony and Nicole Worland would establish the restaurant Tonic at Millthorpe and later Shaun and Willa Arantz would begin Racine Restaurant at Nashdale. Both restaurants at opposite ends of the Orange region would achieve tremendous success and still to this day are two of Australia's most respected regional restaurants.

Modern day Orange has seen the region develop tremendously. Sparkling wines are beginning to establish themselves as some of the best in Australia. Both Swift and De Salis wines having created individually unique, but equally wonderful expressions. Italian and Spanish varietals have been introduced by the likes of Angullong and Rowlee wines, with a surprising amount of success. The 'alternate' grapes have introduced locals and visitors alike to a whole new world of wine.

Colmar Estate have pursued excellence with national recognition for their stunning Pinot Noirs and look to now join De Salis and Swift at the very top of the Sparkling wine world. Meticulous in the vineyard and the desire to produce the best possible wine out of Orange, have seen Bill and Jane Shrapnel gain an embarrassing number of awards in a very short time.

Rising superstars Will Rikard-Bell, Matthew Atallah, Tom Ward, Matthew Eades and Jeff Byrne are among the names that are beginning to produce the wines of tomorrow. They have all looked to region as a place of untapped potential and their early wines are starting to show just what the region is capable of. The future of Orange is in very good hands with these superstars leading the charge.

Charred Kitchen and Bar is in a very fortunate position. Paying the utmost respect to those legends that blazed a trail, establishing a truly astonishing inland food and wine region. We support those heroes of the region today still helping it evolve, improve and encapsulate a clear identity that helps it stand out on a national stage. We hope, as our restaurant progresses forward that we will be able to honour all our amazing producers whilst still showcasing the world of wine, beer and spirits.

COCKTAILS

No amount of physical contact could match the healing powers of a well-made cocktail." — David Sedaris

Storytelling is often a lost art. Here at Charred Kitchen & Bar we are determined to bring it back to life. Our Bar Manager, Brad Morgan, has curated a cocktail list that encompasses experiences and tastes both local and international, as well as some well-known classics, crafted with diligence and care. We have a focus on fresh ingredients of the highest quality, delivering only the best into your glass. If you would like to hear more about the inspiration behind some of our signature cocktails, please seek out our Bar Manager, or any of our team, who would love to bring the story to life.

We would like you to note that all our cocktails can be made Vegan friendly, please indicate to your waiter if this is the case.

We love a challenge, so if there is any classic that you desire, please ask your waiter and we will endeavour to deliver.

- | | |
|---|----|
| Lavender Bradbury | 22 |
| Inspired by the Lavender Farm on the beautiful island of Jersey. The Lavender Bradbury is a vibrant mix of Tito's Vodka, House infused Lavender & Blueberry, St Germain Elderflower, Lemon and Egg Whites | |
| Smoke Eucalyptus | 25 |
| A treat for the senses. Think winter evenings by the fire in the picturesque Blue Mountains. The Smoke Eucalyptus calls for Buffalo Trace Bourbon, Lemon, Egg Whites, and a Eucalyptus Infusion that has been House Smoked with Applewood. | |
| Cabonne Cosmo | 22 |
| We are fortunate enough to be present in a country which is host to some wonderful native ingredients. The Cabonne Cosmo is a homage to the classic Cosmopolitan, but in this case, we make an addition with the 'Queen of Lemon Herbs', Lemon Myrtle. A refreshing combination of Tito's Vodka, Cointreau, Lemon Myrtle Infusion, Lime & Cranberry. | |
| Green Emma | 20 |
| Inspired by our lovely Emma, this is a delicate mix of Zubrowka Vodka, Cointreau, Peach Schappes, Cloudy Apple, Lime and Bitters, topped with a sprinkling of flamed cinnamon. Surely a homage to Emma's fiery personality! | |
| Gin Basil Garden | 24 |
| Fresh, fragrant, and oozing with summer vibes. The Gin Basil Garden is an easy drinking, refreshing mix of Poor Toms 'Sydney Rare Dry' Gin, Lemon, Basil & Egg Whites. Inspired by beautiful summers, spent with friends, trying madly to quench thirst. | |
| Native Pepper Gimlet | 20 |
| Our Take on the Classic Gimlet, favoured by Gin enthusiasts as far back as the 1700s. The Native Pepper Gimlet pays homage to the little Native Pepper Berry, packing a punch to lift the lime and cucumber to another level. This local inspired drink calls for Jones & Smith 'Epoch Signature Dry' Gin, Lime, Cucumber and Native Pepper Berry | |
| 'Pure Martini' | 35 |
| Martinis have the potential to scare even the most seasoned drinker. Let us do the thinking for you! By infusing Hartshawn Distillery Sheep's Whey Vodka, Berto 'Di Torino Bianco Superiore Vermouth & Activated Charcoal, we are left with the 'Pure Martini'. The charcoal removes the impurities from the blend, leaving behind only pure aroma and pure balanced flavour. Served tableside for the extra feeling of elegance. | |

GIN

Gin has numerous amounts of styles. The common element is juniper berries, with distillers adding their own twist of ingredients, botanicals and styles to create unique takes on the spirit. Gin has had a major increase in Australian producers, as many of the local distillers, having ambitions of whisky production, turn to the aromatic spirit as a source of income whilst they begin aging their whisky.

Pétillant Naturel

Before the invention of Méthode Traditionelle (Méthode Champenoise) sparkling wines were made in the Méthode Ancestrale and are referred to as Pétillant Naturel or Pét Nat for short. These wines are bottled before the completion of primary fermentation, no secondary yeast or sugar is added. The wine is unfiltered, usually fruity and funky.

Robert Stein

Founded (planted) in 1976 in Mudgee, Riesling was one of the first four grapes introduced by this spectacular producer, which saw its first vintage in 1981. In 2009 Jacob Stein returned to Mudgee to take over chief winemaking duties and has since won a plethora of awards including GT Wine Young Wine Maker of the year.

Grosset

Jeffrey Grosset established Grosset Wines in 1981, purchasing an old milk depot in Auburn, Clare Valley. The Polish Hill vineyard was planted in 1996 on a sight that consisted of hard rock overlaid with silty and low fertility soils. The sight is challenging with low yields resulting in approximately two bottles per vine.

Western Australia

Frankland Estate

Founded in 1988 Frankland Estate is in Western Australia's most isolated and cool-tempered wine region. Frankland have taken a serious approach to Organic farming and in 2009 were awarded Organic Certification. The Poison Hill Vineyard is a 3-acre site named after the Heartleaf Bush, which grows on the hill and is known for being toxic to livestock.

Semillon

An absolute foundation of the NSW wine industry Semillon from the Hunter Valley is highly regarded the world over. Although it grown with incredible success in other parts of Australia the Hunter Valley expression are unique. Dry, dry crisp and low alcohol in their youth but as age sets in, they become remarkably richer and waxier.

Andrew Thomas 'Braemore'

Andrew Thomas spent thirteen years learning at Tyrrell's until 1997 when released his first wines under his own name. His Braemore Semillon is his benchmark of the varietal coming from vines planted in 1969.

Tyrrell's 'Vat 1'

Perhaps Australia's most recognised white wine the world over. From humble beginnings in 1858, Tyrrells are now synonymous with the Hunter Valley. In 1963 the Tyrrell family began a journey of producing high quality Semillon, the beginnings of the Vat 1 Semillon. Today under 4th generation Tyrrell, Murray, it is revered the world over for its quality and longevity.

Chardonnay

Australia

New South Wales

Central Ranges

Cool climate chardonnay is a very different style of chardonnay to what most Australians may be accustomed to. Look for brighter leaner style driven by crunchy acidity. Yes, in a lot of cases oak is used but it is in harmony with the fruit, which should always be the hero in a bottle of wine.

Giaconda

Giaconda's founder, Rick Kinzbrunner, developed a passion for wine in the 1970's and embarked on an international journey for winemaking knowledge that included stints with Stag's Leap and Moueix in Bordeaux. He returned to Australia in 1980 to work at Brown Brothers and would purchase land at the now Giaconda site where planting began in 1982. The vineyard is now perhaps responsible for Australia's greatest chardonnay.

Leeuwin Estate 'Art Series'

None other than Robert Mondavi is credited with identifying in 1972 the sight that would later become Leeuwin Estate. Denis and Tricia Hogan would even receive mentoring from Mondavi himself in transferring their cattle farm into a vineyard, producing their first vintage 1979. The Art Series are portrayed as Leeuwin's most 'opulent and age worthy wines'

AMBER

Amber wines are made from white grapes. However, to create 'Amber' wines the skins, normally discarded in regular white wine production, are left in contact with the fermenting juice for days to months. This skin contact process changes the colour, texture and aroma of the wine. This creates a very different wine to the more traditional style of white wines produced; therefore, these are separated into their own category.

De Salis 'Lofty'

Established in 1999 De Salis wines has been a force on the Orange region for quality Pinot Noir. Wine maker and owner Charlie Svenson's benchmark pinot is the 'Lofty', named after the family vineyard. Unfiltered and no finning, even vegan friendly, this remarkable wine exhibits wonderful cherry notes along with a wonderful earthiness.

Bindi

The Dhillon family purchased Bindi in the 1950's. 7 acres of the farm are planted with chardonnay and pinot noir vines exclusively, with the original chardonnay and pinot plantings beginning in 1988. Since 2005 Bindi wines have worked hard towards implementing organic procedures, promoting soil life in order to create the best possible conditions for their vines.

Felton Road

In 1991 Stuart Elms identified the site of Felton Road as one of the warmer in Central Otago to produce wine. Today it produces some of New Zealand's and indeed the world's finest examples of Pinot Noir. These wines are normally on an allocation basis only and are sought after by collectors around the world.

Rowlee

James Manny and Nicole Samodol are on a crusade through the Orange Wine Region at present. Immaculate vineyard management, incredibly tasting experience experiences and trying to produce the best wines they possibly can. Their Nebbiolo is a pioneer varietal for Orange but garnering remarkable attention. All the hallmarks of a high-quality Italian producer are there, roses along with other attractive floral notes, joined by incredible dark red fruits, power and irresistible length on the palate.

Barbaresco

Barbaresco is the main rival to nearby neighbour Barolo as the world's premier region of Nebbiolo centric wines. The region differs however having a slightly maritime climate, warmer and drier than Barolo. Barbaresco wines then to be less tannic than those of Barolo and far more approachable at an earlier age.

Barolo

One of the most famed wine growing regions in the world. Barolos, made purely from Nebbiolo, are noted for their tar and roses aroma, solid tannins, high acidity and alcohol, which allows them to age for many years. To be labelled as a Barolo the wine must be aged for 38 months prior to commercial release. 18 of these months must be in oak.

Toscana IGT

Toscana IGT wines can be made in any village in any of Tuscany's 10 provinces. The wines can be made in almost every form imaginable, but it is the dry reds of Tuscany that make this 'sub-region' famous. It's creation 1992 allowed the 'Super Tuscans' to gain the attention they so dearly deserved.

Spain

Aragon

Located in the north of the Spain the appellation encompasses an area from the Pyrenees to the Iberian Plateau and is home to four DO Somontano, Campo de Borja, Carinena and Calatayud. Tempranillo and Granacha are the predominant varietals of the region along with some International and native examples such as Moristel and Macabeo.

Castilla y León

The largest of all of Spain's administrative areas and dominated clearly by red wine production. Tempranillo makes up for over a third of all wine production and is the staple of all high-end wine produced in the region. This excludes Bierzo to the northwest of the region, where Mencia and a few other rare red varietals are used.

Catalonia

Hugging the Mediterranean Sea and encompassing the city of Barcelona the region has a long and proud wine making history. French influence plays a significant part in styles of Catalanian wine including the Cava production which implemented champagne methods in the 1870's. Grenache, Tempranillo and Carignan both thrive in the warmer coastal conditions.

Galicia

Located in the northwest of the country along the Pacific coastline, the region is prominent for its crisp whites made in Rias Baixas. Most of the red wine production comes from inland areas that are significantly warmer. Here Mencia is the dominant varietal produced in a light and bright style.

------	-----------------	----------------------------	---------------	-----

Madrid

Since the 1970's Madrid's wine focus has been centred more around quality than quantity. Granacha is the most prominent of the region's varieties and responsible for its greatest wines.

Rioja

Perhaps Spain's best-known wine region and the home of some truly stunning aged barrel aged Tempranillo. Rioja has an ageing classification system that is commonly displayed on the label to indicate a certain level of 'quality'. Joven are wines that are intended to be consumed within two years of production. Crianza are aged for one year in oak and one in bottle before release. Reserva reds must spend a minimum of a year in oak and must wait a full three years before they are sold to the public. Finally, Gran Reserva, which must spend five years ageing with a minimum two years in oak.

Cabernet Franc

Typically used as a blending grape in Bordeaux and standalone varietal in the Loire, Cabernet Franc has found a unique home right here in Orange, NSW. It was originally masquerading as Merlot in the region until CSIRO tests proved otherwise. An embarrassing mistake has led to a must try varietal in the region if you are lucky enough to find a cellar door that has nay left.

Orange

Shiraz in Orange is elegant and soft but with a definite underlying power. Its cool climate, slower ripening and lower high temperatures than those more famed regions of South Australia. If you're chasing those big bold reds of McLaren Vale and the Barossa, please turn the page (a couple of times). Here you will only find spice and grace.

Yarra Yering'

Shiraz perhaps forms as equally an important part as Cabernet does in the Yarra Yering Vineyard. Among the first plantings in 1969, further Shiraz vines were planted throughout the 1990's along with the purchase of the Underhill vineyard at the end of the 1980's.

Underhill

Situated at the western end of the Yarra Yering Vineyard, this 8-acre block was originally planted in 1973. Yarra however only purchased the block in the late 1980's, at the time it was overrun with blackberry bushes and required intensive viticultural efforts to restore it to its former glory. Today it is responsible for one of the region's most important Shirazes.

Western VictoriaBest's Great Western

Shiraz was originally planted at Best's in the 19th Century with further plantings occurring into the 20th Century. Bin 0 was originally (with perhaps slightly different contents in the bottle) as Hock 0, with bottles originating from the very late 19th century. Later the wine would be referred to as Bin 0 Hermitage, but with Australian producers forced to drop French appellations from their labels in the 1980's it would simply become known as Bin 0 Shiraz. The grapes are selected from the oldest vines at Best's to ensure quality and fruit intensity.

E. Guigal 'Château d'Ampuis'

The grapes that go into making this wine are sourced from seven of the most exceptional plots in the domain. Château d'Ampuis is a classic Northern Rhone blend of Syrah and Viognier, black fruits and solid tannins are very much at the forefront of this wine but a wonderful elegance that year in and out creates a truly spectacular product with tremendous ageing potential.

From the 'Club of Brotherly Love' to the Orange Wine Region Peter has worked hard to produce this tremendous 'Aussie Style Blend', which is fittingly named after his wife Jules.

Lake's Folly, Cabernets

Established in 1963 by the brilliant Max Lake, Lake's Folly has earned a multitude of superlatives. Considered by many to be Australia's first boutique winery, it now produces one of the country's most collected Cabernets. Blended from Cabernet Sauvignon, Shiraz, Merlot and Petit Verdot with differing amounts depending on Vintage, this wine is as special as it is unique. Please note before 1993 the wine was produced solely as a straight Cabernet Sauvignon.

Yarra Yering

Dry Red No. 1

The wine (along with its sibling Dry Red No. 2) that started it all. Dr. Baily Carrodus produced his vintage of the wine in 1973, some 50 years after the last commercial vintage of a wine in Yarra, 1923. It was almost automatic success for the wine achieving international acclaim for quality and reigniting the region. Today Sarah Crowe perhaps even elevates the winery to an even higher level.

France - Bordeaux

Bordeaux is one of the world's most famous wine regions located in the south-west of France. The majority of wines from the region are a blend of merlot and cabernet sauvignon grapes.

Left Bank

Following a request from Napoleon III, the wines of the Medoc were classified by level of importance in 1855. This classification ranges from 1st Growth through to 5th Growth and has stood the test of time, still being relevant today.

Château Calon-Segur

One of the three original vineyards in Saint-Estèphe, it came into the ownership of Nicolas-Alexandre, Marquis de Ségur. Nicolas also owned famous First Growths Lafite and Latour but always exclaimed his heart belonged to Calon-Segur, hence the heart depicted on the label. Predominantly Cabernet Sauvignon with Merlot and small amounts of Cabernet Franc.

Graves

Deriving its name from the soil structure, gravel, Graves is famous for cabernet-based blends, like the Medoc, along with white blends and sweet wines from the Sauternes and Barsac. Only one Château and the sweet wines of Sauternes featured in the Classification 1855 Château Haut-Brion. A classification occurred on red wines from Graves in 1953.

Right Bank

The Right Bank of Bordeaux stylistically concentrates on merlot and cabernet franc grapes. The area's soil type is predominately clay, creating cooler ripening conditions for merlot.

The Libournais

Home to the two most famous right bank appellations, Pomerol and Saint-Émilion, the wines from this region are some of the most opulent and expensive in the world. Named after the township Libourne, the regions clay soils lend themselves to wonderful merlot prominent wines.

CACHAÇA

Cachaca is distilled using straight sugarcane juice as opposed to molasses, which is the main method for most rums. Cachaca has found a home in Brazil from Portuguese influence and as a result often has the synonym of Brazilian Rum.

RUM

Rum is made by fermenting and then distilling from sugarcane molasses or sugarcane juice. Rum has tremendous popularity in Caribbean islands with a variety of styles and methods coming from the region. Rum has strong naval ties and became an important part of British Naval tradition. This helped rum culture spread to far parts of the Commonwealth including Australia.

AGAVE

~ 30ML ~

Agave spirits are made from the agave plant. There are hundreds of species of agave that are used to create varying types of distillation. Most agave distillations originate from Mexico, where they are identified via agave used, appellation and aging requirements.

Mezcal

Mezcal can be made from over 30 types of agave. Production involves the heart (piña) of the agave being cooked for three days in pit ovens, commonly using clay and hot rocks, helping to produce a smoky flavour. The heart is then crushed and left to ferment with water in large vats or sometimes barrels. The fermentation is then taken and distilled in clay or copper pots.

Tequila

Importantly regarding tequila production, the Mexican government and the European Union agreed upon the classification of tequila and its categories in 2001. To be labelled tequila the distillation must come from an authorised producer in Mexico, located in a territory specific to tequila production. Tequila must only use 'Weber's Blue' Agave in its production.

BRANDY

~ 30ML ~

Brandy starts its life as wine. The wine is taken and distilled; the end product is known as brandy. Fruit brandy is distilled from the remaining pressings of grapes or other fruit, otherwise known as pomace. Some brandies are taken and aged in wooden vessels; many also have colourings added to imitate the ageing process.

Calvados

Calvados is a brandy produced in the protected appellation of the same name in the Normandy region of France. It is a distillation created from a cider base, of which can be created from over 200 named species of apples. The distillation must go through a minimum ageing of two years in oak casks. The Domfrontais region also requires a minimum of 30% pear cider to be used in the distillation.

WHISKY/WHISKEY

~ 30ML ~

Whisky or Whiskey starts its life as a grain mash build that is fermented into essentially a beer (often referred to as a wash). This fermentation is then taken and then distilled commonly in a copper still. The spirit is then aged, usually, in a wooden vessel of some description.

Scotland

Whisky in Scotland can be split in five specific categories, single malts, single grain, blended malts, blended grains and blended scotch. All scotch must have a minimum alcohol by volume of 40%. All Scotch must be aged in oak casks for 3 years that does not exceed 700 litres in capacity. There are five regions (appellations) recognised by the Scotch Whisky Society, Highlands (which includes the islands), Speyside, Islay, Campbeltown and the Lowlands.

Outside of regulations and rigamarole, whisky from Scotland is wonderfully diverse, complex and unique. Many of the distilleries are always welcoming of visitors and looking to help those around the world improve on their whisky production.

Blended

Blended scotch whisky is the most common example of the spirit that we have seen in Australia. It has ranged from ultra-inexpensive commercial examples right up to some of the most exuberant prices for spirits in the world.

Lowlands

Many of the distillers that exists in the lowlands have been used to produce spirt for blends or mass market whisky. There are however a few distilleries that concentrate on whisky of a higher quality and more complexity. Even as of now some newer distilleries are beginning production in the lowlands and will no doubt help increase awareness and quality in the region. Commonly look for softer more elegant whisky out of this region.

Highlands

The Highlands is the largest whisky region in Scotland and is also the producer of the most whisky as well. The region also encompasses the island sub regions as well (excluding Islay). The regions style is extremely diverse (owing to size), ranging from bigger bolder styles in the north with a wonderful sweetness to the southern counterparts that are lighter and fruitier.

Campbeltown whisky comes from the Campbeltown 'burgh' located off the Kintyre Peninsula on Scotland's west coast. The region was originally home to around 30 distilleries, but prohibition in the United States and a focus on mass produced whisky forced most of the distilleries to close. Today only three distilleries operate in the once fabled region.

Ireland

It is believed that Irish whiskey is one of the earliest distilled products in all of Europe, with believed production of the spirit occurring in the 12th century by Irish monks. Whiskey from Ireland is often far gentler and more elegant than the nearby examples of Scotland. Today Ireland is the fastest growing whiskey region in the world, as it looks to reclaim its glory days of the early to mid-18th century.

Distillation in Australia is far from a new concept, whisky however historically has taken a back seat to rum production, which gained serious popularity during the 19th century. Late 20th Century however a couple of other distilleries had materialised and began the long journey of whisky production. Fast forward to 2014, when Sullivan's Cove in Tasmania wines best whisky in the world and the Australian industry is turned on its head. The Australian whisky industry has never been stronger, with multiple new distilleries opening each year, all over the country.

United States of America

Bourbon is Whiskey. Despite what you may have heard Whiskey is not a sole entity of Scotland, the basic rules of bourbon are that it must be produced in the United States, it must be made from at least 51% corn, it must be aged in new oak and it must be distilled at no more than 80% alcohol by volume (160 proof).

Another revelation is that they make other whiskies in America not just bourbon, and many of them are fantastic. These other whiskies are based off rye, wheat, barley or a spectacular combination of multiple grains to create the many unique wonderful whiskies of America.
